

Ferry Point
Marina

Lat 39 04' 06"

LONG 76 30' 44"

Wednesday Night Sailing Races

Wednesday night racing on the Magothy has over 70 registered boats racing in seven different classes. In addition to Spring and Summer racing, MRSA also runs a great Fall series on Sunday afternoons through November. For more information, go to the Magothy River Sailing Association website at www.magothysailing.com

From the Chesapeake Bay

- West into the Magothy River to Day Marker #5
- Day Marker #7 (Shore Acres)
- Day Marker #9 (Ulmstead Point)
- Day Marker #11 (S. Ferry Point)
- Follow South Shore to Mill Creek

By Land

- Route 50 East
- North on Ritchie Highway (Route 2)
- East on College Parkway
- Left on Jones Station
- Left on Mago Vista
- Left on River Rd to Ferry Point Marina

410.544.6368

700 Mill Creek Rd | Arnold, MD 21012
www.ferrypointmarina.com | office@ferrypointmarina.com

Discover
THE MAGOTHY RIVER

- Great sailing/boating
- Wednesday night races
- Great anchorages/coves
- Deep water

Magothy River

1 Dobbins Island 10'-12' depth

Dobbins Island is a great day anchorage with a swim up beach area, Dobbins Island is a popular destination and the most well known of the Magothy River anchorages. Smaller power boats can anchor almost to the shore of the island. It's always a festive time on a boating season weekend. Unless your boat draws less than 1 1/2' ft, don't approach from the south side.

2 Eagle Cove 9'-10' depth

Eagle Cove is a truly lovely location for a day-time or overnight anchorage. It is located off the northern end of Gibson Island, but it isn't marked by name on any charts. It is located between Holland Point and Purdy Point—both of which are on most charts.

3 Cornfield Creek 7'-8' depth

Just north of Holland Point on Gibson Island, this anchorage provides good water for 7/10th's of a mile from the entrance. You will find a lovely wooded area to starboard, and protection from winds from almost all directions. Water-skiers use this creek, but it quiets down by evening.

4 Grays Creek 6'-7' depth

Are you looking for a quieter anchorage? Try Grays Creek—it's entrance lies a little over a 1/2 mile north of Dobbins Island, on the NW shore of Sillery Bay. It is a cozy little creek in a well-populated area, yet offers an intimate and peaceful anchorage. Caution—avoid the shoal off the north end of Little Island by following navigation aids. The entrance to Grays Creek is very narrow, but is marked by two pair of daybeacons. Note: there is a also a fuel dock within Grays Creek offering both gas and diesel.

5 Broad Creek 10'-12' water (8' further in)

Cruisers will find Broad Creek easily accessible and attractive, with several good anchorages. Look for the entrance to Broad Creek at red marker 2. Daymarks identify the edges of the shoals, and they are easy to spot. After the shoals, the creek makes an abrupt easterly turn upstream, and reveals a small islet (oddly not always shown on charts). Be aware of the shallow water around the islet (marked with Danger signs). There is plenty of water elsewhere. The shallowest water (just a few feet) is on the northern shore.

6 Blackhole Creek 8'-10' depth

Blackhole Creek is great place to anchor for a few hours or overnight. Enter Broad Creek by Green 3 marker; across the river to port will be the Green 9. Very soon you will see to starboard the Red 10. Honor this marker before turning north. Don't cut it short here. Once you've made the turn, make directly for the red and green entrance markers; passing between them, you should enter easily. Immediately to port, after the Green 1 is a place where you can anchor. Directly ahead is a small private island; beyond you will see PSA sailing club. You can also anchor anywhere in this part of the creek in 8-10 feet of water. Dinghy to the sailing club if you want; they welcome visitors. One caution: don't go through the next narrows farther up the creek because the water shallows very quickly.